Read the article about brands.

Brands through people

By Simon Glynn

What makes consumers choose one airline over another or one mortgage provider over its rival?

Our research shows that your reaction to a brand depends on your experience of buying, using or owning it and not just on advertising. The most important part of that experience is often your personal interaction with people. This is an area that most companies don't understand or invest enough in.

Take airlines. Satisfaction with cabin crew contributes more to people choosing the same airline again than other factors.

Why do companies not spend more on their people when there are clear benefits? Here are two common reasons.

It's too expensive

Many organisations know that people matter. But they don't invest in this area because they think it is a luxury they cannot afford. And it's true that some role models, such as the Four Seasons hotel group or Virgin Atlantic Upper Class, would be too expensive for most to copy.

But there are smart, affordable solutions that create a lot of brand value out of only a little customer interaction. First Direct earns the highest level of customer recommendation of any UK bank through just the telephone contact with its customers.

Customers at QVC, the market-leading television shopping channel, value their interaction with the station's people – in this case not the call centre staff who take the shopping orders, so much as the relationship that viewers believe they have with QVC's onscreen presenters.

The importance is not clear

Satisfaction surveys can hide the importance of people. For example, choosing a mortgage is often very influenced by counter staff in a bank or building society. Research with customers at the critical stage, where they have received a quote but not yet signed a document, shows that their interaction with the mortgage provider's representative is the biggest single influence on their choice.

It is bigger than perceptions of the products and fees, which are often the subject of the brand's advertising and communications. Yet in the same research conducted after the loan is given, customers may have forgotten the good customer service they received and may focus more on general brand impressions. If you conduct your research at that point – and this is often the case – the very important role that your staff have played will not be clear.

FT

A Now decide if these statements are true or false.

- 19 Advertising is by far the most important way of supporting a brand's image.
- 20 Companies often don't invest enough in counter staff.
- 21 Customers may become loyal to an airline if they like the cabin crew.
- 22 Spending money on employee training generally isn't very beneficial to a company.
- 23 Most companies need to understand more about how customers behave.
- 24 Four Seasons and Virgin Atlantic have invested a lot in their people to build brand value.

To: Agnes Wong

Subject: Hong Kong travel arrangements

Dear Mrs Wong,

Last month my company arranged fights, ground transfers and hotel accommodation through your company, Star Travel. We were hosting a meeting for our regional managers here in Hong Kong. We were very unhappy with the results of the booking.

Though all of the fight arrangements were acceptable, two members of our group were not met at the airport as agreed, though their fights arrived on time. After waiting to be met, they finally took taxis. However, when they arrived at the hotel, it turned out that their booking had been changed to a different hotel. They again had to take taxis to get to the right location.

We were treated very poorly by Star Travel and feel we are entitled to compensation. Please contact me as soon as possible to discuss how we may resolve this situation.

Yours sincerely,

Ms Eleanor Adams

Sonos rebounds as Beam speaker pumps up the volume

Smart speaker maker Sonos rebounded on Thursday after posting a return to revenue growth, beating Wall Street's estimates thanks to strong sales of its new Beam soundbar and upgrading its outlook for next year.

Sales of the $399 Beam, which was released in July, "exceeded our forecast", Sonos said, driving sales up 27 per cent year-on-year to $273m in its fiscal fourth quarter. Net losses fell from $14.9m to $1.7m in the three months to September, taking Sonos close to breakeven.

Sonos' shares jumped more than 15 per cent in after-hours trading to $16.40, taking it back above its initial public offering price for the first time in several weeks.

Patrick Spence, Sonos' chief executive, said in a letter to investors that an accelerated pace of new product introductions was boosting sales among both existing and new customers, driving its highest annual revenue growth since 2014.

The Santa Barbara-based company has faced increased competition over recent years as Amazon, Google, Apple and Samsung all launched their own connected speaker systems. Mr Spence has argued that the popularity of Amazon's Echo or Google Home has only expanded the market for hifi systems, amid rising adoption of music streaming services such as Spotify.

Sonos said it expected revenues for the next fiscal year to be between $1.25bn and $1.28bn, implying growth of up to 12 per cent on last year. That includes forecast sales of $485m to $495m for the crucial holiday quarter, up 3 per cent to 6 per cent, though Sonos warned that gross margins would dip due to promotions around shopping events such as Black Friday.

The guidance is ahead of analysts' existing estimates, in contrast with tech companies such as Apple that have been more cautious in their outlook for consumer spending.

Sonos said it planned to expand its business through a tie-up with Ikea and new speakers aimed for use outside the home, suggesting a potential move into portable, garden or in-car audio systems. In September, Sonos' first results since August's IPO underwhelmed Wall Street, with a 7 per cent decline in revenues and widening losses. Sonos has been trading below its $15 IPO price during a torrid time for tech stocks generally.

Message on sensitive e-mails is not getting through When new employees start at Goldman Sachs, one of the first things they are told is that they should not put anything in an e-mail that they wouldn't want to read in the61. Don't complain about colleagues. Don't discuss sensitive deals. Don't say bad things about the competition. If you want to do those things, they are told, use the phone or talk to someone in person.
The same62 has been repeated across the corporate world for years, but the message never seems to get through. Sensitive e-mails and instant messages continue to turn up in public.
It seems that no matter how often they are told, employees continue to see workplace e-mails as casual, private exchanges that no one else will read. The ePolicy Institute, which conducts research and advises companies, recently carried out a survey of 416 companies. The survey showed that only 42 per cent of companies conduct any formal training regarding e-mail usage. Instead, they rely on written policies that are often not read.
Simply telling workers to be more careful is not enough. Some companies are now using advanced software that can block potentially embarrassing messages from leaving a corporate system.
Proofpoint, an electronic security company, offers software that monitors63 as they arrive and depart to detect potentially dangerous words or phrases. Keith Crosley, Director of Market Development for Proofpoint, says heavily regulated64, such as financial services and health care, are among his company's best customers. Kawasaki Motors uses the software to make sure no one leaks its motorcycle designs. The software ensures that personal data such as credit-card numbers and medical histories are encrypted and monitors the disclosure of confidential corporate
